LOWER VIRGINIA.

[Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.] GLOUCESTER COUNTY, VA., Nov. 16 .will give you the result of my observations as regards this part of the country, lying southwest of the Fredericksburg railroad, and between the James and Potomac rivers. For peach growing fand trucking this county, in fact nearly the whole section referred to, is equal to any I ever saw-fully equal to any part of Delaware or Maryland. Were I in search of a farm to cultivate, I would go to either Matthews, Gloucester, Middlesex or Essex, giving preference to Gloucester. The land generally is good and very cheap; the soil is adapted to the growth of all kinds of grain, vegetables and most kinds of fruit. The climate is mild and society good. Transportation of farm products is convenient and cheap. This county, so much devastated by the war, does not appear to have recovered much; in fact, the same may be said of this whole section of the State.

The corn crop in this section, as far as I can learn, is but little if any more than enough to supply the needs of the people; the wheat crop is far short, and they have to buy flour. Very little wheat has been sown this fall, owing to the want of money and inability of farmers to get laborers. The prospects of recuperation by CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, VESTINGS, means of agriculture are not bright. The main dependence for support of the people of the counties bordering on the Chesapeake bay next two months, especially. the counties bordering on the Chesapeake bay and York river is the oyster business, which is GENT'S FURNISHING DEPARTMENT, carried on to a considerable extent-most of the money for which comes from the North. In the York river alone over 100,000 bushels of oysters were planted this year. At Cappa-hosic wharf, the only place that is improving and see us, at No. 83, King st., 3 doors west of aug 1—tf any in this county, I saw some very large oysters of that delicious taste peculiar to York river oysters when good. They were planted some years ago by Mr. Stubbs, living near the place, and engaged in planting.

The operation of the Freedmen's Bureau in a drawback and an evil-intermeddling in con- style. tracts between the blacks and whites, encouraging the blacks to pilfer and steal, by interfering with and sometimes preventing the execution of the criminal laws, and by supporting a large number of negroes able to work. I am told the officers of the bureau at Yorktown have notified the county courts in their district that they have discontinued rations to the negroes, and that each county must support its poor; this is understood to mean that the counties must support the indolent and infirm negroes. The negroes generally are in a miserable condition, many without sufficient food and clothing, half starved, ragged and filthy, too lazy to work, subsisting by poorly cultivating small patches of land, oystering in rivers where oysters abound, and by stealing; but this is such a poor country, so little to subsist upon, that they cannot find much to steal; corn is the principal thing—this they take by breaking the ear from the stalk as it stands in the field and leave the husk as it was upon the stalk. Suffering as the people of this part of the State are from the effects and blight of the war and pest of the negro, they bear it all with great patience and fortitude, seldom murmur, and manifest no hatred of the Washington government and none of the negroes; with these they deal fairly and treat them kindly; but kindness is so much a part of the Virginian's nature that he extends it to all without regard to race or color. When radicalism shall have ceased to exert its pestilential influence over these once prosperous and happy people, and when they can feel sure that no terrible punishment beyond that already invented shall be inflicted upon them, they will become a changed, prosperous and happy people again.

BUTLER AND THE YELLOW FEVER. The Aberdeen Examiner is responsible to

"Prof. Leja is a distinguished optician of New Orleans, and visited Corinth a few weeks since, stopping at the famous Scrugg's House, of course. One day, while sitting at the table, conversing with Col. Johnson, the affable clerk of that popular resort, the conversation turned upon the yellow fever, with the various phases of which the professor was quite familiar, and, among other things, the course of Gen. Sheridan, in neglecting, while controlling the affairs of the Gulf Department, to take the usual precautions to ward off, or, at least, prepare the city for the visit of Bronze John, was severely condemned. In this connection, Col. Johnson remarked:

'You mest confess, Professor, that notwith standing his many faults, Gen. Butler exhibited great administrative ability, in the conception and prosecution of measures to save New Orleans from the dreaded pestilence, while in command there." Up jumped the Optician, his face pale with ill-suppressed wrath, his eyes darting fire: "By gar, vat you take me for? You no believe in a God? You no believe zere is mercie? Yallow tever and G-c-n-e-r-a-l Butler at the

And the choleric Creole walked off almost loaming at the mouth, with fists clenched, mattering between his teeth, "Y-low fe-vor, he cannot believe zere is ze God who has merci.'
